Santa Barbara County Animal Services

Background

- ▶ On May 18, 2021, the Santa Barbara County Board of Supervisors(Board) approved the Animal Services City Contracts for FY 21-22, and:
 - ▶ Directed staff to work with MGT Consultants to develop Full Cost Recovery – eliminating Tobacco Settlement and County General Fund support.
- ▶ On April 19, 2022, the Board reviewed the Consultant's report and:
 - ▶ Continued the “per-capita” methodology for the allocation of Animal Services net costs (costs less allocated revenues, such licenses and adoptions) based on jurisdiction population (used since 2002).
 - ▶ Directed Five Year contract terms, allowing for the gradual phase out of County General Fund support over the Five Years.
 - ▶ Continued the annual Tobacco Settlement support for all jurisdictions for the Five Year Term.
 - ▶ Added a capped 2.5% annual Cost of Living increase.
 - ▶ Held cities “harmless” for population changes over the Five Year Term.

Dear Mr. Mayor and Council Members,

I wanted to write a letter in support of Guadalupe Social Club and their project here in town. I realize that tonight you are considering whether to require their business to obtain a Conditional Use Permit, which delays their plans as well as adds additional costs to their budget. As part of our community, I feel that a venue like this is needed for businesses like ours to host seminars, training, corporate retreats, and events as well as utilize restaurants in town for catering. Their business scope falls within the allowed use already in place for this zone. The faster Guadalupe Social Club can open, the faster the city and other businesses will start to see an increase in revenue from their business operations.

Sincerely,

Subject: Animal Services contract

Dear Councilmember Robles,

I'm not able to attend tomorrow evenings's council meeting at which you will hear a presentation about animal services in relation to the city's contract. But I did want to share a few thoughts with you as someone who has been dealing with local municipalities and animal control contracts for many years.

I am very sympathetic to the frustration of the contract cities as the county increases prices without increasing services. It doesn't seem fair, even if in fact the county is trying to do cost recovery after subsidizing some of the cities. A number of us did push the board of supervisors very hard to keep cost recovery to a minimum and spread it out over several years. They heard us and that is what they did.

I wish I could tell you that there was an affordable alternative that would meet the need but there is nothing at this point. The City Of Carpinteria, which some cities have looked at as an alternative because they no longer have a contract with the county, is barely hanging on. I am their only foster home and they do not have enough cage space or resources to deal with the animals that come in. And they are a more stable and better resourced city. Further, today, when veterinarians are so busy, it's very unlikely that a veterinarian would agree to a contract as a shelter service provider so I don't see that as a viable option for Guadalupe.

I'm also concerned that Guadalupe will get poor service should the city try to contract with the Santa Maria Valley Humane Society. Their service is notoriously poor as is their treatment of their employees; any cost savings they offer would come off the backs of underpaid employees who have been quitting in large numbers. That's not a recipe for adequate service provision. At this point they also don't have a field service operation which means that if you don't contract with the county, you will not have any qualified people to enforce the codes. The police really don't like to do it!

If there's any comfort, the animal community has pushed hard on the county to improve services and programs and they are listening. They have formed a new Advisory Council composed of stakeholders who are working closely with animal services leadership to improve programs and services. Your staff can attend those meetings to see what's going on and share their concerns. I would encourage you to ask tomorrow night during the presentation about that process and how Guadalupe might participate.

I hope the city will renew its contract with the understanding that we are working to make sure that the contract partners get their moneys worth. For those of us in animal welfare, this is a top priority!

Sincerely,

Lee E Heller, Ph.D., J.D.
